

Emily Thompson has an expertise that spans the spectrum of real estate development having worked with non-profits, for-profits, and market rate developers on commercial and residential projects for the last 18 years. At GMD she has worked on the preservation and development of affordable housing across the Pacific Northwest, including 775 units of new housing in Seattle. Throughout Emily's career in affordable housing, she has consistently demonstrated her commitment to the community with the development high quality housing; providing tenants safe, stable and sustainable homes. Emily is involved in the Housing Development Consortium of King County as the past co-chair of the Tax Credit Affinity Group, and is active in ULI. She attended the Master's Degree Program in Urban Planning, and holds a Bachelor's Degree, from the University of Washington in Seattle.