

PANELIST—PALMYRA GERAKI

Palmyra Geraki (she/her) is a licensed architect, educator, writer, and editor. She is an Assistant Professor at the University of Wisconsin-Milwaukee and the principal of PALMYRA, a design practice working across disciplines, scales, and typologies. She previously worked at Pei Cobb Freed & Partners Architects in New York City, Leddy Maytum Stacy Architects in San Francisco, and Interform in Thessaloniki, Greece, and taught at the University of Illinois Chicago, California College of the Arts, and Yale University. She has been a Skyline Editor for the New York Review of Architecture, and her writing has appeared in several publications. She currently serves on the Board of Trustees of the AIA Chicago Foundation and was previously on the AIA Chicago Young Architects Forum Advisory Committee. She has been an active member of The Architecture Lobby, an international labor advocacy organization for the AEC industry, since 2017, having served as the organization's financial comptroller as well as a member and leader of the Academia Working Group and the Cooperative Network Group. Palmyra received her B.A. in 'Architecture' and 'Ethics, Politics & Economics' from Yale University and her M.Arch. from the Yale School of Architecture.